The Noll Brothers must be doing something right in the country music scene. With the constant touring they have been doing since the release of their debut album in January has finally paid off with 'A Country Heart' the album, entering the ARIA Country Album chart at #12 this week. It also moves up to #4 on the Australian Country Album Chart!

The boys have just come off the road after doing shows with Adam Harvey, Catherine Britt and Lee Kernaghan and now announce some of their own headline shows (see below). Their current single, the title track off the album, 'A Country Heart' is getting regular airplay around the country with the video still sitting in the Top 20 on the CMC Top 30 chart.

'A Country Heart', which was co-written with their little brother Shannon (he also happens to sing backing vocals on this track), tells the story of their parents and themselves, but has universal truths about the sacrifices made by the individual for the good of the family. "A Country Heart is our story," Damian explains. "It's about our family but it's also about every family out here on the land....." Its' a situation the Noll's know first hand. After more than a century, in 2003 the Noll's had to sell the family farm which was brought on by the ongoing drought.

The brothers have always been country music fans with their material dictating the direction for the album. Find out for yourselves at any of the following venues:
